1 Foreword

2 ISO (the International Organization for Standardization) is a worldwide federation of national standards bodies
3 (ISO member bodies). The work of preparing International Standards is normally carried out through ISO technical 4 committees. Each member body interested in a subject for which a technical committee has been established has 5 the right to be represented on that committee. International organizations, governmental and non-governmental,
6 in liaison with ISO, also take part in the work. ISO collaborates closely with the International Electrotechnical
7 Commission (IEC) on all matters of electrotechnical standardization.

8 International Standards are drafted in accordance with the rules given in the ISO/IEC Directives, Part 2.

9 The main task of technical committees is to prepare International Standards. Draft International Standards 10 adopted by the technical committees are circulated to the member bodies for voting. Publication as an 11 International Standard requires approval by at least 75 % of the member bodies casting a vote.

12 Attention is drawn to the possibility that some of the elements of this document may be the subject of patent rights.
